

Judgement Daze

Rahul Mahajan did not win Bigg Boss 2 but he created enough hype for Colors to court him again. He's been chosen to judge a show called Chhote Miyan where 13 kids will display their stand-up comedy skills. "I'm always the one who's being judged. It's good to be judging now," says Mahajan. Just one question: is he really the right choice to judge anyone?

Max Paint

Anup Soni has taken on a mammoth task. The actor is playing the role of artist M.F. Husain, 92, in Nadira Babbar's stage production, Pencil Se Brush Tak, which traces the journey of the legend from childhood to old age. "I will enact the artist's fascination with women, family life and the journey to fame," says Soni. Till the actor meets the artist in Dubai later this month, he has taken inputs from Babbar, who's known Husain well.

I've cut down on work in the south and am trying to do as many different characters as I can in Hindi films.”

Sadha Sayed, actor, as she takes up Hindi films, among them Khallbali, Click and forthcoming Love Khichdi.

NEW BRIT IN TOWN

Another foreign import has found her way to good old Bollywood. Lisa Lazarus, who's been ducking comparisons with Katrina Kaif just because she's also from the UK, is the latest newbie to be paired opposite an ageing Salman Khan. The Miss UK 2008 will be seen in Vijay Galani's Veer where she plays a British girl. "The offer came after I was noticed at Miss Universe," says Lazarus, 20, who is learning Hindi. "She'll be a huge draw when I release the film overseas," says Galani. Will this one last as long as Kaif?
