

CONCERTS

Next IN LINE

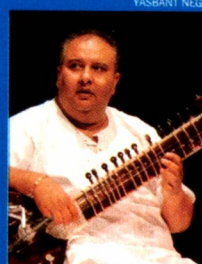

Wondering what happened to the next generation of the gurus? Then make your way to the India Habitat Centre, Delhi, on July 3 and 4 to hear them in concerts organised by the Banyan Tree and Performing Arts Promotional Trust.

SHUBHENDRA
RAO

Protégé of Pandit Ravi Shankar, Rao has developed a style of his own after being under the maestro's wings for 30 years. His music is aesthetically appealing.

SANJEEV
ABHYANKAR

Disciple of Pandit Jasraj, Abhyankar has superb control over laya and tala when presenting Jasrangi Jugalbandi, where two singers simultaneously sing different ragas but meet in one place.

SHUJJAT
HUSSAIN

Son of the legendary Ustad Vilayat Khan, Hussain is the seventh generation of the Imdad Gharana. Each note is proof of his steadfast riyaz and thought process.

SARTHI
CHATTERJEE

Disciple of Pandit Rajan S. Mishra and Arun K. Chatterjee, Sarthi has the perfect blend of the Benaras Gharana's sweetness and the Kirana Gharana's layakari. by S. Sahaya Ranjit

FILM REVIEW

PAYING GUESTS

What a Drag

RATING ★☆☆☆☆

Director: Paritosh Painter

Starring: Shreyas Talpade, Jaaved Jafferi

Those who remember the sweet genius from Iqbal, the loveable rogue from Dor and the somewhat sly letter writer from Welcome to Sajjanpur, please stay away. This Talpade, rouged, sari-clad, and bejewelled, seems a throwback to a bad '80s movie starring Chunkey Pandey, who's here too—yes it's that sort of a movie—as a donkey-braying, lisping, balaclava-wearing petty crook. For reasons best known to the director, Talpade and Jafferi are forced to play wives to Aashish

Chowdhry and Vatsal Sheth. Celina Jaitley, Riya Sen, Neha Dhupia and Sayali Bhagat stand around sporting what looks like their entire shopping in Bangkok where this movie is based. Smart. At least we know why they took the roles. They wore what they bought at the producer's expense. One hopes the same is not the case with Talpade, unless he is trying for a new career as drag queen diva.

Golmaal, which began the trend of bromances in Bollywood where boys go on paid vacations and come back with home videos passing off as movies, has a lot to answer for.

by Kaveree Bamzai

