

The Game Changers INDIVIDUALS

RAMACHANDRA GUHA | 51 HISTORIAN

THE WRITE STUFF

Writing with equal ease about the environment as he does about the history of Indian cricket and democracy, Ramachandra Guha has emerged as one of the most influential voices in the role of the humanities in education in recent years. As a petitioner in various public causes, the most recent being the one against the Salwa Judum in Chhattisgarh, Guha has never shied away from facing controversy in the eye. His lectures in recent years have focused on areas such as "why India cannot be a superpower" and the environment, provoking not just university students but the government as well. Listed at 44 among the 100 most influential intellectuals worldwide by the Foreign Policy magazine, Guha also made publishing history earlier this year when he clinched a landmark Rs 97-lakh deal with Penguin to write seven books.

by Nirmala Ravindran

Usually to be found
Writing at home or researching for his future books in London or Delhi.

Mantra for change
Autonomy, creativity and innovation should drive education.

Loves Listening
to Hindustani classical music.

"His commitment to excellence, his integrity and his passion to take on new challenges makes him a truly unique intellectual."

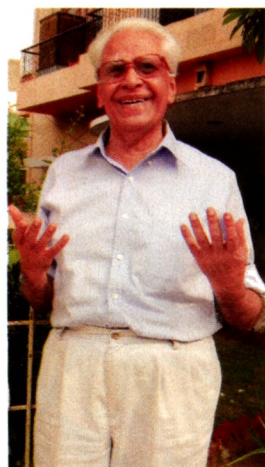

Nandan Nilekani, chairman, UIDAI

ANIL BORDIA 75

FORMER EDUCATION SECRETARY, Government of India

LIFELONG QUEST

Having taught at DU for two years, Anil Bordia made it to the Rajasthan cadre of the IAS in 1957, spending 35 years there, before retiring as the education secretary to the Government of India. Post retirement, he launched the Lok Jumbish project in 1992 in Rajasthan for grass-roots education, but the state Government abandoned the project seven years later under Education BA and MA in History from St. Stephen's College, Delhi.

Mantra for change
"One fourth of teachers don't go to school. We must discipline them."

Loves Urdu poetry by Faiz Ahmed Faiz and Ahmed Faraz.

controversial circumstances. Even this could not put an end to his endeavours to educate the rural poor. In 2001, Bordia conceptualised Doosra Dashak, a programme to educate school dropouts between 11 and 20 years of age. So far, 20,000 children have benefited from it.

by Rohit Parihar

"A creative bureaucrat, he shares a good rapport with the NGOs."

Lalit K. Panwar, principal secretary, Rajasthan

SIVAPRAKASAM SIVAKUMAR

51 LECTURER, DIET, Tiruchirappalli

RURAL CRUSADER

"An enterprising teacher, he has

S. Swaminatha Pillai, former professor, Nat