

CULTURAL PROGRAMMES
BY KANAVU STUDENTS
ARE A HIT IN KERALA

CENTRE FOR DEVELOPMENT STUDIES Thiruvananthapuram QUALITY MATTERS

It was an invitation from former Kerala chief minister C. Achutha Menon to return to Kerala and build an academic research institution that breathed new life into eminent economist K.N. Raj. Having resigned from Delhi University as its vice-chancellor, Raj took up this offer and in 1971, he set up the Centre for Development Studies (CDS) at Thiruvananthapuram. With a faculty of 26, the CDS runs two programmes—an M.Phil in applied economics and a Ph.D in economics, both affiliated to the Jawaharlal Nehru University, Delhi. Its 14-member governing body headed by N.R. Madhava Menon consists of academics from across the country. Though CDS receives an annual grant of Rs 4 crore from the state and the Indian Council of Social Science Research, it raises as much from various endowments and research projects. The most respected social sciences institute in South Asia has so far produced 40 Ph.D scholars. Its alumni list boasts of names such as Mihir Shah, member, Planning Commission; Ram Manohar Reddy, Economic and Political Weekly editor and Thomas Isaac, Kerala finance minister, among others.

CDS has one of India's largest library in social sciences with more than 1.25 lakh titles.

by M.G. Radhakrishnan

brought to you in India by

We must always leave a good impression.

India,
master the art of fine
writing
with Parker.

PARKER®

Buy online at www.luxor.in