IN SECOND PLACE, LSR IS COMMITTED TO REINVENTING ITS PEDAGOGICAL STYLE

would expose them to contemporary discourse in the given field. The faculty endeavours to produce global citizens who also take pride in the positive aspects of the Indian tradition. To foster this, the college is launching certificate courses in subjects like Indian heritage and archaeology. Another flagship programme being introduced this year is a diploma course on conflict transformation and peace-making. The thrust of the college has also been on equity and access. Students from underprivileged backgrounds are given opportunities to develop leadership. "Our placement cell's agenda this year was to find jobs not just for the toppers but also for students with a disadvantage," explains Gopinath. National Service Scheme, which is a defunct society in many colleges, has an active enrolment of nearly 800 students who are given well-defined projects.

Third-ranker St. Stephen's also continues to produce students who excel in careers across the spectrum. A large number of students are selected for prestigious scholarships abroad every year. One of the new initiatives at the college has been to offer quality education to people from underprivileged backgrounds. "This year we offered a record number of stipends to needy students," said Nandita Narain, dean, St. Stephen's College. It is this inclusive approach to education that has helped the college churn out some of the best talent in the country. Other colleges can learn from the arts toppers.
