ST. XAVIER'S, KOLKATA, EMPHASISES ON QUALITY EDUCATION AND SELF-DISCIPLINE

posure will go up. The faculty, in turn, will have to keep up with the students and will be better prepared.

What makes the institute stand out is its unwavering focus. "People who come to SRCC don't just come to college. They come to do a particular course and that is their focus. The institute has grown a solid vertical," says Max India's Analjit Singh, one of the prominent alumni of SRCC. Other well known alumni include former Union minister Arun Jaitley and Atul Punj of Punj Lloyd—names that speak for themselves.

Meanwhile, at second place, St. Xavier's College, Kolkata, which is turning 150, has many reasons to celebrate, one of which is the sustained lead that its Commerce Department commands. Principal Felix Raj says: "The college is about quality education and self-discipline." This year, St. Xavier's received 8,000 applications for the commerce stream. While subjects like accountancy and marketing are popular, the internship for undergraduate students introduced this year is an added attraction.

Similarly, at Chennai's Loyola College, the unique international programme on the national entrepreneurial network has ensured that the commerce students of the college have a distinct advantage. Academic exchange programmes with world-class institutes like the Singapore Management Development Institute and the London Metropolitan University have also held it in good stead. With alumni like chess grandmaster Viswanathan Anand, little needs to be said about the wholesome education that commerce students at the college are imparted. At Loyola, academics is just one of the many moves that helps its products stay ahead in the game.
