PRINCIPALSPEAK Ramesh Chandra Deka, Director, AIIMS, Delhi

"In the post-wto era, we have to ensure that students don't just pick up knowledge, skills and attitude. They have to be made ready for leadership in healthcare and globally competitive research."

neck to retain the second and third slots. Jawaharlal Institute of Post-Graduate Medical Education and Research (JIPMER), Puducherry, and Maulana Azad Medical College, Delhi, also retained last year's position. The Madras Medical College, Chennai, moved up ahead of Grant Medical College while Seth GS Medical College, Mumbai, overtook Kasturba Medical College, Manipal.

What makes a medical college a topper? A bright workforce and brighter technology? Of course, but not just. "A great hospital is different because of its internal culture of excellence," says Dr Ramesh Chandra Deka, who has just become the director of AIIMS. "Students here get trained in a different philosophy, ethics and patient management that's hard to find anywhere else. And they carry that with them wherever they go," says the man who joined AIIMS as a student in 1971. Values define CMC, too. "Our motto is to make advanced medical technology affordable and serve ordinary people. We don't sell educa-
