

WHEN LG LEAD MET TEAM INDIA

It was the moment that an entire nation had been awaiting for the past two years. The ICC Twenty20 World Cup. The atmosphere was charged with energy and anticipation. An anxious lull gripped the colossal stadium as every Indian sat with bated breath waiting for the national champions to step onto the field once again. And so they did, but not alone. Amongst the deafening cheers of a frenzied crowd, 11 young Indians took to the field, leading their heroes onto the battleground. Their heads held high, their eyes burned with pride as they stood their ground next to the Indian Cricket Team to the tune of the Indian national anthem. And thus began the realisation of a dream that millions of innocent eyes had seen across India, brought alive by a familiar friend called LG. ■

THE INVITATION

The talent hunt invited participants from all parts of the nation to showcase their extraordinary skills. Participants could either upload a 30 second audio-visual film on the LG website or tryout at the live auditions conducted in virtually

“ I am really really happy. And as my uncle is accompanying me to the ICC World Cup, it's going to be a lot of fun. Also I'll ask Dhoni to make my dream come true by winning the match. ”

THE DREAM

This journey began when a unique opportunity presented itself in the form of an unprecedented nationwide initiative by LG. LG Lead XI was an extensive talent hunt for children on an unparalleled scale. These talented young cricket fans, accompanied by a parent, would be given the opportunity to tour with their favourite cricketers across England and travel with them to all the ICC Twenty20 venues where Team India would play. But that's not all, they would also have the honour of representing their country next to the Indian Cricket Team at the centre of the field at the time of the national anthem.
