in the Lok Sabha. Thus, nearly 15 per cent voters were from Uttar Pradesh, which accounts for as much of the Lok Sabha strength.

The analysis of the data thus obtained took into account the shifts in politics that have taken place since the last elections as well as the rumblings within the alliances in the last two months. The analysis takes note of the formation of a bloc within the UPA consisting of the Lalu Prasad Yadav's RJD, Mulayam Singh Yadav's Samajwadi Party and Ram Vilas Paswan's Lok Janshakti Party who do not have any seat-sharing deal with the Congress, neither in Bihar nor in Uttar Pradesh; Naveen Patnaik's Biju Janata Dal snapping its 10-year-old ties with the BJP in Orissa and the PMK walking out of the UPA to join hands with Jayalalithaa's AIADMK in Tamil Nadu.

As with any such exercise, there is a margin of error of plus or minus 3 per cent. Besides, at the time of the survey, the process of candidate selection was still on in most parties. The survey was handled by Priya, associate director, Vivek Naubhar, senior client service executive, and Shikha Mittal, client service executive.
