THE BEST REPORT The panel's anti-terror strategy ranges from raising special forces for speedy

■ Time that India framed a comprehensive counter-terror doctrine.

■ Needs to build special forces capabilities for a long-standing unconventional war.

■ Must employ better PR as a counter-terrorism instrument.

■ By certain quiet actions, India can demonstrate that terrorism is no longer a cost-free option for Pakistan.

■ Foreign terrorists should not be allowed the same rights as citizens.

■ Need a long-term relentless policy at the national level and the will to target our enemies.

■ Enhance police capability through better motivation, training and equipment.

■ Single unified counter-terrorist command with resources and adequate money.

■ Potent military deterrent with a strong emphasis on the air force.

■ Actionable intelligence.

■ Sustained monitoring of implementation of Supreme Court judgments.

■ The new Police Act should now replace the Act of 1861.

■ Create a national IT database on terrorism.

■ Website with provision for people to report on terrorism.

■ Six-monthly regular review of the DGPs with the prime minister and the leader of the Opposition.

■ Raise the diplomatic and political costs on Pakistan for fomenting terror.

■ Effective surveillance and monitoring—internal, external.

■ Strengthen counter-terrorism reaction for immediate action.

■ Strengthen law and order to focus on grassroots human intelligence.

■ Develop a capability for pre-emptive action, both covert and overt, on terrorist leadership based in Pakistan.

■ Enforce accountability at the top of the security system.

■ Bring police and intelligence officials into decision making levels.

■ Provide security to the private sector without overstretching CISF.

■ Tap lower levels of the police force for intelligence gathering.

■ Prevent decision-making structure in the government from being monopolised by people without significant field experience.

■ Modernise the armed forces to respond adequately to Pakistan.

■ Create a new ministry for internal security

■ Need to strengthen internal laws with curbs on individual liberties.

■ Review and cut NSG flab. Create another organisation for VIP security.

■ Have a charter of duties and accountabilities for all persons heading various organisations related to terrorism.

meaningless. The war against terrorists is never fought and won in courts of law. In less than 10 per cent of cases, you would be able to arrest the people. We have already lost 85,000 people to terrorism. In any case, where the masterminds are outside the scope and jurisdiction of your law, what can you do to the Zarar Shahs and the Lakhvis? No fundamental capacity building in intelligence has taken place. The Home Ministry hasn't even taken the first step. But the camps are not the only targets, the perpetrators of it are.

Maj-Gen. (retd) V.K. Datta : We have done covert operations over a number of years and trained and motivated volunteers willing to undertake anything asked of them. Using them is a question of political will—the ability to do what the enemy is doing to you. Our long term plan is inadequate. We face a deep-rooted malaise which started with the Partition of India. Pakistan has a long-term plan to dismember us by internal strife. We have only a five-year perspective towards Pakistan and its army. We dismembered Pakistan in 1971, had 93,000 POWs and still achieved nothing. Just one IC-814 was hijacked to Kandahar and the nation started crying. Till American forces are present in Pakistan, you can't conduct surgical strikes because they have bases there.
