

A ride in the London Bus

London

Much like in New York, There is no one thing that you can be told to do in London. (If you head out in search of an Indian restaurant, it's a sign that you are a boring sort). But there is more to London than that.

TATE MODERN GALLERY: If you have some time in the City, you should check out the new Tate Modern gallery located in the south bank of the river Thames. This stunning conversion of a former power plant also has one of the best collections of modern art in New York.

IMPERIAL WAR MUSEUM: Another must see museum in London. Make sure the permanent Holocaust exhibition there.

JUST WALK AROUND: If you want to have fun the way the locals (natives?) do, take the underground route to Piccadilly Circus and make your way to Soho and China town. The various lanes here- Berwick Street, Wardour Street, old Compton Street, Dean Street-have a host of restaurants and bars and off beat art and music stores. This area was once famous as the red light area of the city. (Remember Jack the Ripper?) But is now the place where young Londoners come to chill out after the day is done.

Paris

Yikes! Getting around Paris a city where people refuse to speak English is not very easy. The subway trains-their Michelin tyres and all-might be cramped but they are efficient as long as you know where you want to go. Now, most people will tell you to go to the Louvre. Take it from experience; unless you've more than a day in hand don't go there, on a crowded summer day 2 hours are expended just waiting in the queue. The same applies to Eiffel tower, if you want to go on top. Paris is a city best walked around, Go down to the Champs Elysees and just walk down and may be sit down in a café and lounge away time. That's what Parisians do.

PERE LACHAISE CEMETERY: If you really like Jim Morrison's music when you were young it might not be a bad idea to go to the Pere Lachaise cemetery on the edge of the city (the end of metro line 2) but take a small bit of warning-there are no signs telling you how to get there and getting lost in the cemetery is not a great idea. By the way Morrisons grave is the one surrounded by machines gun totting gendarmes.

Just walk around the city

Exotic Night

