

S

MANMOHAN SINGH

- His expertise as a renowned economist is his biggest USP in the times of recession.
- His integrity is unquestionable. There is not a single accusation of corruption against him.

SONIA GANDHI

- The Kingmaker, she is also the only one who is keeping the Congress together.
- Her silence. She seldom speaks her mind, so very few know what she is really thinking.

O

MANMOHAN SINGH

- If he wins, he gets to keep his promise and double the per capita income in seven years.
- Though he has no support within the party, he knows he has the dynasty's full backing.

SONIA GANDHI

- The elections are a grooming ground to ready Rahul for future prime ministership.
- Hopes that the Congress emerges as the single-largest party so as to win back sulking allies.

W

MANMOHAN SINGH

- Responses are emotional rather than political when dealing with both allies and critics.
- Has outsourced the PMO to 10 Janpath. He merely implements the decisions Sonia takes.

SONIA GANDHI

- Is inaccessible to party workers and the common man. Not in touch with grassroot realities.
- No second-rung leadership. Works through a coterie; trusts no one except her family.

T

MANMOHAN SINGH

- Despite being a prime ministerial candidate, he is not contesting for the Lok Sabha.
- If it's a hung Parliament, the Left will not support him; will insist on another candidate.

SONIA GANDHI

- Her failure to improve Congress's tally may question her unchallenged leadership.
- UPA's current allies like Lalu Yadav and Sharad Pawar may desert her for the Third Front.
