Holidaymakers may not find it easy to get their hands on cheap alcohol in Goa this month. With elections round the corner, the state Excise Department has stepped up its vigil, demanding daily sale statements. Alcohol dealers are downing shutters in protest, claiming it is difficult to compile so much daily data. Egged on by the Election Commission, the department is keeping a close watch on the alcohol trade. But with the tourist season set to begin, the liquor industry is feeling the heat. by Aditi Pai

English education is set to get redefined for aanganwadi schoolteachers in Dharavi slums with a two-month pilot project using interactive DVDs in English to make learning the language easier. The project aims at training teachers—mostly women and adolescent girls from the community—to develop varied and interesting teaching aids for primary and pre-primary students. The teachers take part in sessions, interspersed with discussions, role-plays and quiz sessions. The project is run by Landmark International Foundation for Empowerment Trust (LIFE). by Swati Mathur

Despite the downturn, job seekers in Kolkata should be cheering. According to a report from staffing company TeamLease Services, Kolkata, Bangalore and Mumbai are the top three cities where companies are looking to hire. Kolkata has witnessed a low attrition of just 3 per cent in the last three months. Pune, Delhi and Hyderabad bring up the bottom of this list. Pune's steep decline is the result of a decrease in growth in IT, media, retail and FMCG. The city is also at the bottom of the charts in terms of business outlook. by Nandini Vaish

SEN AND SINGH ON A SITE INSPECTION TOUR

PATNA | Resurrecting History

Plans to revive the ancient Nalanda University are underway. The Bihar Government has already acquired the site, 70 km from Patna and not too far from its old seat. A 10-member mentor group, including Rajya Sabha MP N.K. Singh, Nobel laureate Amartya Sen, Lord Meghnad Desai and representatives from China, Japan and Singapore, have a revival blueprint ready. As the former deputy chairman of the Bihar State Planning Commission, Singh put in his networking skills to liaise with Indian and international leaders. The university, a public private partnership between India and 16 East Asian countries, is to open for admissions by 2010. by Priya Sahgal
