Management courses are changing; they are becoming shorter, crisper and much more focused. As several sectors in India flourish, from retail and fashion to finance and risk management, the need for creating a competent manpower with domain knowledge is becoming imperative. Topics which deal with inclusive growth and societal benefits such as wildlife or natural resources management are also finding ready takers as the youth becomes more sensitive with rising climate change concerns or the needs of the rural community. The B-schools across the country are rising to the challenge and formulating a plethora of exciting options for aspirants to choose from. The programmes mainly cover all basic principles of management but offer greater electives in the niche area of specialisation. Such modification has ensured that the country's most desired qualification becomes even more enviable. What follows is a listing of some of the more popular courses that have been launched in the recent years and the institutes where they are being offered.

Agri-business Management

More than half of our GDP relies on agriculture and the current breed of managers realise the plethora of opportunities in this sector. From handling procurement of seeds and crops to making new technology available to farmers, developing financial models for effective marketing to providing micro-credit facilities, agri-business managers could well be ushering in the next Green Revolution.

Human Resource Management

Over the years, the role of an HR executive has changes from simply hiring and firing, to training, maintaining and motivating a suitable workforce. This makes it perhaps the most vital tool a company can have. Apart from management principles, a course in management teaches people skills, team spirit, and handling of diverse and complex situations.
