

Fly across the Himalayas
and land in 216 BC.

It is said China's first Emperor ordered his soldiers to serve him for eternity. One by one, they were cast in terracotta. They survive to this day.

Every square inch of China has a story to tell.

Only in China can you still see signs of the Stone Age, find a giant Buddha statue overlooking a confluence of three rivers and walk through a palace of 8600 rooms.

Only in China can you return to ancient villages, their technologies and their art.

Only in China can you step out of the old world into a nightclub, be part of the global business mainstream, play golf in hundreds of designer courses, pick and choose from 10,000 star hotels and have your fill of eight streams of authentic Chinese cuisine (or if you prefer, six streams of authentic Indian).

Only in China can you shop for everything from antiques to designer clothes.

The time to visit China is now.
