

TELEVISION

Prime Time

Reality shows aren't going anywhere. There's a new one once again. But besides bride-hunting, train your remote for a thriller and a discovery series.

Fringe If your appetite for thrillers like Lost is large, Fringe on WB will whet it further. Think Final Destination meets CSI. An FBI agent investigates an international flight where passengers have met horrid deaths. But obviously there's more. Tune in but beware, there's blood and gore ahead.

India National Geographic scours the country for unique—read abnormal—stories in its series, India. There are two-headed children being worshipped, eunuchs celebrating and female infants being abandoned among other uniquely desi traditions. Just like breaking news on TV, did you say?

Perfect Bride Think Rakhi Ka Swayamwar in reverse. Five men, 10 women, one show to hunt for a bride. Star Plus continues its affair with reality shows. In this one, mothers step in too. Expect drama, saas-bahu style. We have not come too far. by Jhilmil Motihar

ART EXHIBITION

Colour Plus

M. Sovan Kumar is in awe of trucks. He wishes them to be built of marble, gold or pieces of diamond. His exhibition, Rites of Passage, showcases paintings that are a dazzling revelation of his animated art consciousness and a comment on the present urban phenomenon. No doubt it will be a visual delight. From September 19 to October 20 at the Art Konsult, Delhi. The other Delhi show, Think Small, is unique as 45 artists have created works in a size of 12" x 9". These artists have taken up the challenge to render intimate details in a small format. It is not just about the size; it's about a retake on the perception that big is good. Despite the size and format theme as a common thread, the artists represent a variety in their mode of expression, from classic abstraction to photo-realism. Apart from S. H. Raza, Akbar Padamsee, watch out for youngsters Pooja Iranna, Rajeshwar Rao, Apurva Desai and Tara Sabharwal whose work is interesting, and consistently so. Till September 25 at Art Alive Gallery, Delhi. by S. Sahaya Ranjit

IF YOU HAVE 90 MINUTES, watch Alarmel Valli's Bharatanatyam performance at the India International Centre, Delhi, on September 16.

Stage of LIFE

What Director Feroz Abbas Khan's Hindi adaptation of Arthur Miller's Death of a Salesman sets the stage for veteran actors Satish Kaushik with Seema Biswas and Kishore Kadam to showcase their talent. Kaushik, well-known for his comic roles, will be essaying the role of Ramlal, an aging salesman who dreams of success and recognition but is incapable of realising them.

When and where From September 22 to 26 at Mumbai's Prithvi Theatre.
