

THEATRE

Staged PHYSICS

What A performance of Copenhagen written by acclaimed playwright Michael Frayn. The play has completed more than 300 performances at the National Theatre in London. It also opened at Broadway at the Royale Theatre and ran for 326 performances.

revolves around the initial meeting of the two physicists at Copenhagen in 1941, then another in 1947, and finally an imaginary meeting that takes place after all the characters have died.

Who Frayn's other plays include Democracy, besides the farce Noises Off. He has also written critically acclaimed novels such as Headlong, Spies and Towards the

SMITHA

PRAKASH BELAWADI

BALAJI MANOHAR

Why Copenhagen speculates on what might have transpired between Nobel Laureates Niels Bohr and Werner Heisenberg at Copenhagen in 1941 at the height of the German advance into Russia, before America's entry into the war. A historic meeting that could have changed the outcome of the war and subsequent events in the world. The play

End of the Morning. Copenhagen is being directed by well-known theatre and film actor and director Prakash Belawadi. The main characters are played by Belawadi, Balaji Manohar and Smitha.

When and where July 31 to August 2 at Ranga Shankara and August 6 to 8 at Yavanika, Bangalore.

by Nirmala Ravindran

ART EXHIBITION

Pulling Them In

How can the public be initiated into art? By being accessible, says Roshini Vadehra, 26, director of the Vadehra Art Gallery. The Vadehras are trying to induct newcomers, who wouldn't come otherwise, through their fourth gallery at Delhi's DLF Emporio Mall. They also sell accessories designed by the artists for those who are not confident about investing in an artwork yet. The new gallery opened on July 19 with an exhibition of works by artists who have been associated with it over the years. The works on display include those by M.F. Husain and S.H. Raza and younger ones like Atul Dodiya and George Martin. The highlight is a kitschy seven-and-a-half foot sculpture by Ravinder Reddy, a woman's head in red decorated with loud accessories.

by Nandini Vaish

SUBIR HALDER

OBITUARY

Voice of Belief

Gangubai Hangal
1913-2009

As a young woman of 24, Gangubai Hangal would travel 30 km by train from her home town in Dharwad to Kundgol. Reaching Kundgol, she would walk to the home of her guru, Sawan Gandharva. The next eight hours would be lost in the world of music. It is perhaps this dedication and single-minded pursuit of a passion that immortalises Hangal's music, who passed away on July 21. Few know that as a 12-year-old she sang at the Belgaum session of the Indian National Congress in 1924 with Mahatma Gandhi and Jawaharlal Nehru in the audience. Hangal was a rebel of sorts. In the early 1950s, she and some other artistes boycotted All India Radio as a protest against the process of audition. She was promptly black-listed. A traditionalist from the Kirana Gharana, she never compromised her art to gain popularity. But she was also modern in her outlook. She believed that if the future of classical music was to be secure, young people needed to be trained in the traditional guru-shishya way.

by S. Sahaya Ranjit