

The Game Changers

JULY 27, 2009

Government apathy. Public cynicism. Corporate greed. Some individuals and institutions have let nothing come in the way of cutting edge solutions.

“The three pillars of the Indian education system are its institutions, faculty and students. Inclusive growth, especially in higher education, is the key to making these pillars stronger.”

MANU KUMAR LAL, Gurgaon

Plan of Action

Your cover story on education (“The Game Changers”, July 27) makes fascinating reading. The list is comprehensive and shows that there are people and organisations who have creative ideas that can change the lives of many ordinary people. We need such initiatives as it is unreasonable to expect that the Government can by itself satisfy the aspirations of people in such a large country like ours. In fact, we need to recognise such innovative contributions through an award like the Green Awards or the Alternate Nobel Prize. DBN MURTHY, Bangalore

There has been a lot of hue and cry about the status of higher education in India (“From Preaching to

Talking Points

I must congratulate INDIA TODAY for the prompt and balanced coverage of the Sharm el-Sheikh talks (“Talking Terms”, July 27). No restraints, no hyperbole, no omissions and nicely summed up in a few words of advice: “Timelines for business with Pakistan till it meets its commitments.” That’s just what is missing in the joint declaration. India forever gives Pakistan a handle for counter-accusations, glancing off some US flak onto India, seemingly as a co-accused in this dirty game.

RAVINDER SHARMA, via www.indiatoday.in

The surrender by Manmohan Singh, apparently under American pressure, is not only shameful but suicidal as well. The genuine intelligentsia, with the help of the media, should generate strong public opinion to force the Government to abandon the idea of meaningless talks while Pakistan continues to endorse terror.

A.K. SHARMA, Chandigarh

Practice”, July 27). While it does require attention, the state of primary education in our country needs to be improved as well. The main reason why half the children in government schools can’t read or write even after attending school for five years is because of the government schools’ policy to promote all children at the primary level irrespective of their abilities. This matter demands immediate attention.

MANGALA KRISHNAN, via www.indiatoday.in

Hooch Horror

It’s ironic that hooch has claimed over 150 lives in Gujarat, a so-called dry state (“Tippling to Death”, July 27). Such cases prove that prohibition, even if implemented, is rarely successful. It only helps the liquor trade flourish

FOR SUBSCRIPTION ASSISTANCE, CONTACT: Customer Care, India Today Group, A-61, Sector-57, Noida (Uttar Pradesh)-201301.
Phones: 2479900 from Noida, 95120-2479900 from Delhi and Faridabad, and 0120-2479900 from Rest of India.
Toll Free No.: 1800 1800 100. Fax: 0120-4078080. E-mail: wecare@intoday.com