

FORGIVE YOURSELF

As a mother, you would want to give your child the best and hope nothing would ever go wrong. But that's impossible. Don't set such unrealistic expectations from yourself. You can make errors, make wrong judgments, sometimes you may not have enough time. Don't let guilt rule you. Or else the love and your enthusiasm will be taken over by the feeling of guilt. Forgive yourself if you falter somewhere and do pat yourself for all the big and small things you are doing for your child.

LOVE YOURSELF

Only a person who loves himself can give love to others. Love and respect the way you are. The more you love the person in you, the better you'll play the role of a mother. And you being the role model, your child will learn to love himself. Now that is one lesson of life that will alter your child's very existence.

PAMPER YOURSELF

Haven't you become some sort of a machine after motherhood? Cooking, supervising, school, hobby classes of children...there is simply no time for yourself. And then you yearn for the days when life was not like that. Why yearn? Reclaim your life. Chill out with your friends or your partner; do what you have longed to do in life may it be pursuing studies or a hobby. Your child will surely love the new avatar of the rejuvenated and happy mom.

child. Tell him these are the areas I need to work upon while these are the attributes I feel proud of. It'll be easier for your child to get along with you. He too will learn to marvel at his strengths and accept his weaknesses.

FACE YOURSELF

Analyze your strengths and your weaknesses as a human being. When you are not a perfect human, how can you be a perfect mother? Accept your limitations. Be open about them with your

TRUST YOURSELF

Trust your instincts. Trust your intentions that you and only you can think the best for your child. Ifs and buts will stay in life forever but remember what you did was the best you could do. So never brood over what has happened or lose faith in yourself after a couple of mistakes. After all you are as old as a mother as your child's age. You are still learning and I am telling you, you are doing a great job!

POSITIVE PARENTING

by Sudha Gupta
CHAIRPERSON, MOTHER'S PRIDE
& PARENTING EXPERT

Live your life the way you want and not the way a mother should. Only then you'll be able to give your best and enjoy your role as a parent.