

The brand aims at giving its guests a refreshed experience and a series of new benefits. One of the planks is that of health and wellness. The brand targeted one of the key factors – food. Not only did it want to offer healthy food options to guests but food that makes one feel energetic throughout the day. They therefore introduced the concept of active foods.

The active foods at Gateway are a combination of low glycemic index foods and super foods that are packed with antioxidants and phytochemicals. Glycemic index ranks carbohydrate containing food based on their effect on blood sugar level over a period of time. The aim is to guide the guest through a careful selection of complex carbohydrates, whole grains, vegetables and legumes with low glycemic index and fresh fruits and other quality food products high in antioxidants. This food keeps energy levels balanced for a long and fruitful day. Active foods are present in all menus at the hotel. All the food served in the hotel is also trans fat free.

The brand has carried the plank of health and wellness forward by introducing in room yoga at all its hotels in short capsules.

This is probably the first time in the world that a hotel chain has offered in room yoga. The guest has the choice to select between three regimens. With the yoga mat in the room and the videos playing 24/7 on in the room TV, guests can choose to exercise whenever they wish to. The yoga is based on the Bihar school of yoga which is globally renowned for its pure, simple and systematic yoga practices. The three regimens are of asanas that allow specific muscles and ligaments to gently stretch and relax in coordination to the proper movements of bones at their joints, Pranayamas and Yoga Nidra.

Another interesting Gateway feature is "Explore" packages that help the guests explore uniqueness of each Gateway city they are in. The guests can choose from a range of experiences at different hotels, a visit to Taj Mahal and the Agra Fort at Agra, evening arati and a boat ride on the Ganges at Varanasi or a customized wine tour and tasting session at the vineyard and a pilgrimage in Nashik.

The brand has received great response from all quarters. It enjoys guest referral scores of more than 80%. The strong response from the developer community is evident from the strong growth in footprint inspite of the slowdown in the economy...
