

the Genealogy, Stupid!", August 24). It has taken long to transform a borrowed system into one compatible with our genius. In a dynasty-laden paradigm comprising leader-owned political formations, the inheritors should be groomed purposefully for governance.

Panic Attack

Undue hype and the Government's failure to control the pandemic seem to have created panic over swine flu ("How Long Will It Last?" August 24). As a result, businesses, social lives and education have also been adversely affected. In this scenario, the article provides an equipoised assessment of the situation. The Government initiative and public adherence to norms of proper hygiene must go hand in hand.

Early diagnosis of swine flu and timely treatment can save many lives. People need to raise their resistance levels by consuming adequate nutrients, exercising and pranayama. It is up to us to prevent the H1N1 virus from spreading further.

Gate of Glory

The assertion that the "British-built India Gate has the names of fallen soldiers from the two World Wars who served in a colonial army" is incorrect ("Memorial Hole", August 17). India Gate was raised by the government of India as a grateful memorial for all gallant men of the undivided Indian army who laid down their lives in World War I. There is no connection of this memorial with World War II. We have, however, failed to honour the brave soldiers who died in it. It is high time we honour their sacrifice.

Standing Tall

Having been a member of various search committees responsible for the appointment of vice-chancellors in Uttar Pradesh universities, I can firmly say former governor T.V. Rajeshwar tried to attract the best available academicians from premier institutions of the country for top positions ("Dubious Distinction", August 10). He was also not hesitant to initiate extreme action against vice-chancellors who tarnished the image of the academia. The former governor upheld the highest standards in public life and academicians would always remember him for his impeccable track record.

Clash of the Titans

How the Ambani brothers can together share the entire gas resources as per the Memorandum of Understanding is any body's speculation ("On the Warpath", August 17). The Government should not have allowed private entities to explore and exploit natural resources, which are collectively owned by the people of this country and has a long-term impact, economically as well as ecologically.

Power and privilege apparently go hand in hand. This applies even to a caretaker government like Charan Singh's which has spent Rs 50 lakh from the exchequer just on junkets. Nearly 40 senior officials of the Central government have been abroad on some pretext or the other. Every fourth day a minister finds himself aboard an international flight bound for the West, the Middle East or the Far East. Labour minister Fazlur Rehman's visit to Kuwait, Abu Dhabi, Dubai, Muscat and Saudi Arabia was undertaken because he wanted "to explore ways and means to increase employment opportunities for Indian migrant labour and to assess how far the recent Supreme Court judgement (under which a prospective immigrant has to deposit one-way fare) has affected the process of migration."
