

Amid speculation and fears due to the global downturn, the Indian Art Summit strikes many right notes in its second year

Photographs by VIKRAM SHARMA

LEADING ARTIST AND ADVISORY PANEL MEMBER ANJOLIE ELA MENON CHECKS OUT A STALL (ABOVE)

A VISITOR LOOKS AT AN UNTITLED ANISH KAPOOR SCULPTURE (LEFT); SUBODH GUPTA'S BRONZE INSTALLATION—THREE MONKEYS—WAS A MAJOR ATTRACTION (RIGHT)

THE ART SUMMIT ATTRACTED 40,000 VISITORS, FOUR TIMES MORE THAN LAST YEAR, LEADING TO A GATE COLLECTION OF RS 80 LAKH.

The New York-based Thomas Erben Gallery managed to sell a video work of German filmmaker Matthias Muller as well as two pieces of Chitra Ganesh priced at $9,000 each.

Another plus for the Art Summit this year was the inclusion of big names among the participants. "I think the participation of respected galleries like the Lisson Gallery from the UK, which brought celebrated installation artist Anish Kapoor's work to India for the first time, will add to the reputation of the Indian Art Summit," said artist and curator Bose Krishnamachari. London-based Kapoor's sculptures were sold to a prominent Indian family of collectors.

One of the sculptures was reportedly sold for a whopping 1.5 crore. Despite some hiccups like infrastructural limitations, the summit attracted over 40,000 visitors in four days and featured art works ranging from the oils by Anjolie Ela Menon and S.H. Raza to installations and sculptures by Kapoor and video art and drawing by