

I.Con

JANUARY 26, 2009

Greed, negligence and lax regulation combine to deliver the largest ever corporate scam in the country. As India Inc reels, the Government grapples with the mega fraud at Satyam, amounting to Rs 7,136 crore.

“Satyam’s bunch of lies calls for better corporate governance. A thorough investigation, stringent punishment and transparent auditing will help India Inc check such frauds.”

Wake-up Call

Our system is tailor-stitched to suit the rich and influential (“I.Con”, January 26). The Government and other agencies concerned like SEBI should use the Satyam fraud to plug loopholes in the system. It should be mandatory for all public limited companies to file a true projection of their finances and balance-sheets. To avoid heavy cash transactions in the balance sheets, our checks and balances should be very stringent. SUBHASH CHANDRA AGRAWAL, via www.indiatoday.in

The failure of all checks and balances in preventing the fraud by Satyam chairman B. Ramalinga Raju shows that systems are only as good or as bad as the people who operate

Modi Mania

Will one Nano project and investment worth Rs 12 lakh crore erase the tragedy of Godhra (“Modi’s Meltdown Cure”, January 26)? Industrialists may have given their approval to Narendra Modi’s style of governance, but is Modi equally good for the country and its people?

There are undoubtedly many hopefuls for the prime minister’s post, and Modi is also one among them. But will winning adulation for the astounding success of Vibrant Gujarat alone catapult him to the top post? Perhaps Modi needs to do more to prove his mettle.

them. The Government should organise swift and objective judicial action against those whose insatiable greed breached the trust of their investors and employees. In the case of the Enron scam in the US, it took just four months of trial by jury to sentence Jeff Skilling, president and CEO, to 24 years and four months in jail in spite of the high-level political contacts of its founder Kenneth Lay.

The Satyam fraud, a case of malpractice and financial irregularity, justifies the bright blue hoarding of Satyam Computers at the Bengaluru Airport: “Play the game, transform the business”. Raju’s fraud game gave a whole new meaning to business
