

MUSIC REVIEW

Paper Trail

It's the season to celebrate paper. While the Dean Gallery in Edinburgh is showing more than 120 works by Pablo Picasso titled Picasso on Paper, spanning the years 1899 to 1971, closer home the Bodhi Art Gallery in Mumbai has put together a show celebrating paperworks by acclaimed Indian artists. Titled Tracing Time, the works have been put together by gallery Director Sharmishta Ray. Paper has always made for a more intrinsic though contained medium and it is this aspect that Ray focuses on in the works of Ganesh Haloi, Manjit Bawa, F.N. Souza and others. On till June 10. by Nirmala Ravindran

A WORK ON DISPLAY

(L TO R) KHAN, BROACHA, KHEMU

IF YOU HAVE 37 MINUTES, listen to Bob Dylan's 33rd studio album, Together Through Life. The 10 songs don't make your spirits soar, but the iconic artist still makes you press replay. Sony Music/Columbia Records; Rs 399

FESTIVAL

Dance Blends

Unbound Beats of India, a festival starting from May 25, will feature young and committed artists of diverse dance styles at the India Habitat Centre. On show will be choreographed pieces by Indian and foreign disciples of gurus like Saroja Vaidyanathan and Shovna Narayan among others.

Ragini Krishnan, 28
Bharatanatyam
USP
Fresh aesthetic appeal

Yamini Reddy, 26
Kuchipudi
USP
Powerful and communicative abhinaya

Jayaprabha Menon, 37
Mohiniattam
USP
Experimental yet traditional

Victory LAP

While dance forms like Koothu and Panchavadyam that originated in and around the temples occupy the world stage today, there are lesser known forms that languish for want of information and support. One such form is the Devarattam.

What it means Dance of the Gods.

Why it is important A combination of muntherkurvai and pintherkurvai, dances performed in front of and behind the chariot of the victorious warrior, it was not uncommon for soldiers to join in. Performed without any formal music, huge drums set the beats while the dancers hold a piece of cloth and dance to the rhythm.

Where to catch it Theatre group Rafiki brings a Devarattam workshop for the first time to Bangalore. The workshop will introduce participants to this unique performance form. At Visthar on May 30. by Nirmala Ravindran