

OBITUARY

The First Khan

Before the three Khans, there was Feroz Khan, Stetson, cowboy boots and too-tight trousers in place. Starting in 1960 with second leads in films such as Oonche Log and Safar, he became master of his own destiny, crafting the unique FK style of guns, girls and gorgeous locales. There was nothing original about it, whether it was Dharmatma or Qurbani, but it was a western idiom, peppered with masala doses that became a patent. FK may have become a parody of himself in later years with movies such as Prem Aggan and Janasheen but anyone who has seen Sridevi swinging on the beach in a red sari in Jaanbaaz and Zeenat Aman shaking her booty in a white gown in Qurbani, will remember FK as the man's man who loved women.

Feroz Khan
1939-2009

Sarong-clad women emerging from the pool, stiletto-shod women tossing their hair about in a club, sun-drenched women lying across him in a jeep. He loved them all. They adorned his frenetic cocktails of sex and crime, set to songs that seem racy even for today's remixed times. An actor, director, producer, and yes, the creator of a dynasty of sorts. by Kaveree Bamzai

ART EXHIBITION

The Aerial Way

Delhi-based artist Rajesh Srivastava uses Google Earth and aerial imagery to create grid-like patterns of urban habitats.

He uses these along with meticulously painted figures to create a narrative geography on canvas. Hovering over this terrain of boxes and lines are witty symbols—burnt chapattis, eye pupils, latches and locks—suspended like shrapnel from an imploding social structure. The show, The Human Condition, is on display at The India Habitat Centre from May 5 to 10. by Bandeep Singh
