Magical Strings

As a little girl from Ujjain, Anupriya Deotale went for vocal music classes but her heart and mind always pulled her to the adjacent classroom where violin lessons were held. She followed her dream. Deotale came to Delhi where she was initially tutored by Ustad Amjad Ali Khan and later got the opportunity to learn the instrument from sarangi maestro Pandit Ram Narayan. Deotale's style is different and she has enriched it further with the influence of her different gurus. Listen to her at Epicentre, Gurgaon on May 13.

MUSIC REVIEW

Multiple Notes

There's something about Kishore Kumar that makes him a contemporary musician. A whole industry has sprung up imitating his voice by relaunching and compiling original and cover versions of the legend. Sa Re Ga Ma has released Kishore Kumar in various moods, a compilation of 40 songs in an unadulterated form. The albums include Kishore Rocks On!!! by Manish Newar and Pehli Mulaqat by Seetal Banerjee. Newar selected his favourite songs that depicted the versatility of the singer, while Banerjee has both solos and duets in the album. Legends never die, they live forever.

ART EXHIBITION

A Vivid Canvas

Prriya and Chintans Art Studio in Mumbai brings together the collective works of four artists—Hemant Ravandale, Hemant Sonawane, Nilesh Vede and Rakesh Pattnaik in an exhibition titled Artroute. The artists hail from varied backgrounds, but seek artistic serenity amid the clutter and chaos around. On till May 16.
