

Heat Wave

Whoever thought boardrooms were boring hasn't seen Playboy's latest list of 10 hottest female CEOs across the US. And sharing space with lingerie queens and adult book authors is none other than an Indian techie. Rashmi Sinha, CEO of presentation sharing website SlideShare, isn't just a sexy face of course. Originally from Delhi but currently based in San Francisco, Sinha has a PhD in Cognitive Psychology from Brown University. This woman, as the magazine says, is clearly on top.

Linen Overload

Singer Adnan Sami seems to have taken the phrase all the world's a stage quite literally. His bedroom battles with now estranged wife Sabah Galadari have tumbled outside for public view. Now after the couple has exhausted their arsenal of harassment accusations, Galadari has claimed that Sami's father, a Pakistani, killed Indian soldiers. Really people, we get it that you're angry, but please spare us the gore. Close your door.

YOGEN SHAH

"Shah Rukh has told us that we will be the cheerleaders for KKR next year." Sunanda Hiroo, Sana Chirawala, Rupali Kantharia, Ritika Chhibber, Samyukta Surendra and Ananya Bera, six cheerleaders who won a reality show and spent a week in South Africa, without performing even once because of the country's laws.

REMOTE RESURRECTION

Her Manglish (Malayalam plus English) accent raised quite a few eyebrows. But that didn't stop former Miss Kerala Ranjini Haridas' soaring popularity as the anchor of Malayalam singing reality show Idea Star Singer. Her turn on the telly made Haridas the pin-up girl of the entire Malayalee diaspora. So when she decided to quit the show, outraged fans flooded the channel with letters and phone calls demanding the return of her anglicised Malayalam. Out of options, the channel was forced to bring her back by public demand. Couldn't ignore the power of the remote controller, eh?
