Battle of the Blog

There's no love lost between Fatima Bhutto and President Asif Ali Zardari. The fiery writer never shies away from blaming her late aunt's husband for her father's assassination. In her newest blog entry on The Daily Beast, Bhutto criticises Zardari's tumultuous reign. "We are not safer, our neighbours are not safer and we have not made any strides toward fighting fundamentalism," she writes. Will her words be heard?

Indian bankers have reason to cheer amid the economic gloom. HDFC Bank Managing Director Aditya Puri has emerged as India's Best CEO, according to Finance Asia's annual poll of investors and analysts. Not surprising, as HDFC posted a 41 per cent rise in net profit in the last financial year at a time when other banks are only counting losses. He's clearly earned it.

"I've called my label Mulgee (girl in Marathi) because people have always called me that. I've done something that comes from my heart."

The brazen Dolly of Oye Lucky, Lucky Oye! is back. Richa Chadda was taking her time choosing her next film and she's finally found her second role. Chadda will be seen in the interestingly titled Benny aur Babloo, a dark comedy to be directed by debutant Yunus Sejawal in which she plays a dancer. "The director said he didn't think anyone else could do the role better," she says. Here's hoping she proves her director right.
