

5 Out of Sync Shriram Family, 1990

Conflicting aspirations within the family took their toll on the DCM Shriram Group. The group was parcelled out into DCM Ltd led by Vinay Bharat Ram, DCM Shriram Consolidated Ltd led by Ajay Shriram and SIEL Ltd under Siddharth Shriram. The split left their companies in a financial mess.

7 Turf Wars Modi Family, 1989

The Modi Group companies ranging from chemicals and sugar to sponge iron also succumbed to the contagion of family squabbles. After some fierce wrangling, the group was split between the five sons of founder Rai Bahadur Gujar Mal Modi led by K.K. Modi and K.N. Modi with his three sons. Following an agreement, Modi Rubber went to the K.K. Modi faction, while Modi Mills came under the control of K.N. Modi. Later, M.K. Modi, son of K.N. Modi became the head of another group company, Modipon Fibres.

8 Oh Brother Rahul and Shishir Bajaj

Rahul Bajaj, chairman, Bajaj Auto, may have "settled" succession issues between his sons but has had no such luck with brother Shishir Bajaj. Shishir was to exit from the Bajaj group with Bajaj Hindustan and Bajaj Healthcare but the settlement soured over valuations. The six-year-old dispute has Rahul and his cousins, Neeraj Bajaj, Shekhar Bajaj and Madhur Bajaj pitted against Shishir. And it's not over yet.

9 Disunited Colours Birla Family, 1987

India's first corporate dynasty could not hold on to its cohesiveness for long. After patriarch G.D.'s death in 1983, one of India's biggest conglomerate groups was carved out. Of G.D.'s three sons, K.K. Birla got Zuari Agro, Hindustan Times and four sugar mills. B.K. got Century Textiles and Kesoram, and his son Aditya got Hindalco and Grasim. The rest was broken up between eldest grandson S.K. Birla, son of L.N. Birla, and others.

6 Side Effects Malvinder and Analjit Singh, 1990

"Ranbaxy, India's first MNC pharmaceutical giant," INDIA TODAY noted in June 2008, has also had its share of break-ups. Patriarch Bhai Mohan Singh, divided it between his three sons—the late Parvinder got Ranbaxy Labs, Manjit got Montari Industries and Analjit got Max India. But Analjit is now up against Manjit and the late Parvinder's sons, Malvinder and Shivinder, who are contesting Analjit's claims as the sole legal heir of Bhai Mohan Singh.

10 Apart for Good Goenka Brothers, 1979

Even the Goenkas could not survive as a unified business structure. Patriarch K.P. Goenka split the group between his three sons—Gouri Prasad got Duncan Agro, Jagdish got Anglo-India Jute among others, and R.P. got Phillips Carbon Black, Asian Cables, Agarpara Jute and Murphy India.
