

Crumbling FORTRESS

Bad news keeps raining on the Left Front Government as an agitation in Lalgarh adds to the miseries of the CPI(M) which is already reeling under the setbacks in Singur and Nandigram and local body elections

By Elora Sen

Lalgarh when translated means 'red fortress'. In the Jangalmahal area of West Midnapore, West Bengal, it is something of a misnomer because this is where the CPI(M)'s red colour has almost vanished. The tribal-dominated area is up in arms against the ruling Left Front Government and their "sarjamgiri" (we will never give up) cry has been rending the air for almost last three months.

It was one blast that wreaked havoc in the peaceful life of the tribals here. On November 9, Maoists attacked the convoy of Chief Minister Buddhadeb Bhattacharya and Union Steel Minister Ram Vilas Paswan, who