

Do you regret to be an Indian

How can you expect political parties to include great projects & policies in their manifestos, when their target customers (voters) are only looking for 3rd grade offers like kilo one rupee rice, waiver of agricultural loans repayment, free color TVs, construction of Ram mandir, being soft with Jihadi terrorists, caste reservation in private sector jobs etc? In India, "only 56% voters are casting their vote". Most of these 56% voters are illiterate or less educated & laborers or lower middle class people who can't think beyond those petty offers. Mostly remaining 44% voters are well educated & in white collar jobs who can think wise but never utilize their vote. Our immediate goal is to bring these 44% voters to polling booths & instigate all parties to include sensible things, given below, in their manifestos. This is the only way to make India a Super Power. Study the following ideas & join your hands with us, if you are convinced.

Remember, the more of you join your hands with us, the more are the chances of incorporation of these points in many parties' manifestos:

Elections :

idea-1 Election Commission should publish all parties' synopsis manifestos in one book & distribute to all voters, free of cost. It helps voters compare available choices. EC should restrict parties to limit their campaign to the contents of their respective manifestos. EC should disqualify ruling party from participating in next election, if it fails to implement at least 90% of its manifesto. We are electing the Government to collect taxes & spend for us 1 to 2 lakh rupees per head in 5 years. Can't the Government spend Rs.10/- per head towards better elections? If still Government feels it as a burden, it can do like this: an A-4 size magazine with one lakh copies of circulation charges two lakh rupees from advertisers for a single page ad. Think about how much EC can charge for a book with 25 crores of circulation. There are roughly 25 crores of families in India & one manifesto book for one family is enough. EC can out-source this job by selling all the ad space to a single wholesaler. This huge exercise will make politicians feel accountable.

Public sector :

idea-2 Till yesterday, I was the Additional Director General of Police. Today, I am deputed to Andhra Pradesh State Road Transport Corporation (APSRTC) and posted as the Managing Director. My new strategy is to book cases against all private road transport operators & see that there is no competition for APSRTC..... To stop this nonsense, IAS, IPS etc officers should not be posted as CEOs or MDs of Government companies (PSUs), as they know nothing about business. Like IAS, IFS, IPS, IRS, we should create IMS (Indian Management Service) to run PSUs.

Education :

idea-3 Interested course: Software Engineering
Qualification : Master's degree in Biotechnology
Post applied for : Sales Executive (life insurance policies)

By inquiring her latent interests & potentials, Department of Education should suggest each student a couple of subjects in which there are maximum chances to excel in career. Human resources department should forecast the demand of employment in different fields for the next 5 to 10 years. Based on the above 2 reports, a student should choose her course. If we require 50,000 mechanical engineers in 2013, we should not allow more than 55,000 students to study mechanical engineering in 2009. Current practice is that AICTE grants permission to two thousand engineering colleges to admit 120 students per college, per year, into mechanical engineering stream and all these colleges keep on filling their seats till the end of this world, irrespective of the demand & supply situation of mechanical engineers.

Corruption :

idea-4 Have you ever seen Anti Corruption Department arresting any IAS or IPS officer? Why do they fail to get proper evidence against even class-3 employees also? We should outsource the job of Anti Corruption Department to a few private companies. Ex: the private company should be paid with Rs.50,000/- on proving a class-3 employee's corruption. It will be Rs.5 lakhs for every class-1 employee etc. If one company leaves a corrupted employee by taking bribe, another company will catch that corrupted person. We should create this kind of competition by authorizing some 10 companies to do this job. The company's fee is to be paid from the provident fund account of the corrupted employee only.
