Because in a business where he is competing with Tata, Birla, Ambani and Vodafone, he is the biggest, and in an era of gloom, has proved to be an island of boom.

Because given the lead of 25 million, even if Airtel stood still, it would take the nearest competitor nearly 12 months to catch up.

Because with annualised revenues of Rs 38,000 crore for 2008-09 and profit before tax of Rs 15,000 crore, Airtel is among the most efficient money machines and by 2013, Bharti will be a trillion-rupee group.

Because he is engaged in the transformation of telecom into a lifestyle business, ranging from calls to games, from movies to music, making a big play for the Indian mind-share with Bharti Airtel Triple Play, Telephone, Broadband and tv, on a single line.

Because Best Price, his tie-up with Walmart, will take off by June. Because without doubt, he is the face of the new Indian entrepreneur.
