ibly arousing, here's a newsflash: Chances are you're not into kinky sex. But, according to this INDIA TODAY-AC Nielsen-ORG MARG sex survey I have been devouring with growing fascination, a lot of your fellow Indians are, and you, and I for that matter, are merely a part of the vanilla majority. Three out of 10 Indian women who've had sex approve of kinky sex, and 13 per cent want it all the time. One in five men approximately think kinky sex improves their relationship; in Mumbai, one in three men are into it. Hyderabad is overall the kinkiest city, with 45 per cent of the total respondents approving of kinky sex, at least sometimes.

What kind of kinky sex are we talking about? The survey offers tantalising glimpses: 15 per cent men have used sex toys, with Hyderabad trailblazing once again with 41 per cent. On the other hand, only one in 20 Indian women admits to using sex toys, with Bangalore leading the way with 14 per cent. Which makes me realise again how little I know; I thought sex toys were mostly for women. So what toys are two out of every five sexually active men from Hyderabad using? Moving on, one out of five Indian women like role-playing, though whether this is a kink or a defence mechanism this survey cannot, of course, tell us. What we do find, though, is that women in Ludhiana and Lucknow feel the strongest need to play out roles during sex. Men in, you guessed it, Hyderabad, are the likeliest to be found role-playing during sex, at a healthy 56 per cent. Exactly what roles Indians like to enact during sex is, reasonably, a matter of speculation. Slightly more eye-opening is the news that 15 per cent of all respondents have tried BDSM (Bondage-Domination-Sado-Masochism) sex, with a staggering 97 per cent of men in Ludhiana claiming to have had sado-masochistic sex. Strangely enough, only 30 per cent of Ludhiana's women say they were involved in BDSM practices, so I would assume one in three women in Ludhiana is experiencing a severe amount of pain.

I find these figures extremely interesting in a country where sex toys and pornography are offi-
