For 2,661 respondents of the total of 5,353 who say they have watched pornography. Figures add up to more than 100 because of multiple choices. All figures in per cent

that among those who have watched porn, nearly one in four women (23 per cent) was single and one in three (29 per cent) was married. If any proof was needed that pornography is becoming a home-grown industry, it is here—one in five women discovered pornography at home. And nearly half also devotedly used it at home, in the bedroom to be precise, with 45 per cent of all women inspired by pornography to try new positions. It's a sanction they have from their significant others, with 55 per cent saying their sex partners approve of pornography. It is not just feeding their fantasy, it is also redefining their intimacy.

Video rentals are the most common form of pornography while one in 10 porn-viewing women say they are willing to star in their own skin film given a chance. Bangalore has the highest percentage of such women, with 19 per cent of the porn-watching women saying so. What does it mean in a world where pornography is seen mostly as masculine territory, a licence to thrill? One aspect could be of coercion, as it was with Jammu's Anara Gupta in 2004. One in every 10 women in Ludhiana says she was made to watch porn under duress. Another element could be of liberation, of empowerment, enhanced by the women's confessional mode.
