

exhibition

Digital Imprint

BANGALORE In what promises to be the most exciting display of work in the field of photography, the exhibition Heresies: A Retrospective by Pedro Meyer will open simultaneously across 64 venues around the world this month. While it will be organised in a host of museums around the world, Gallery Tasveer will bring the collection to India.

Mexican photographer Meyer has for long been considered one of the most provocative and powerful artists for his pioneering work in the era of digital imaging. It was the advent of digital technology that saw the evolution of the artist from a documentary photographer to a digital documentary maker, combining elements of different photographs to arrive at a "different truth". It was his statement that "every photograph, whether digitally manipulated or not, is both truth and fiction." This earned him the nickname of Heretic in the conservative world of documentary photography, the key behind the title of the exhibition. As Indian gallerist Abhishek Poddar puts it, "We have always considered it a very ambitious project that will change the paradigm of organising photo exhibitions forever."

The magnum opus, spread across 18 countries and 52 cities, will feature different exhibits at different venues. The concept will also feature an online photographic archive of over three lakh images and 200 DVDs that Meyer has photographed over 60 years. Challenging the limits of current photographic exhibits, the display will combine large format prints with new technological elements, such as digital galleries that integrate audio, text and images. The use of iPhone and iPod for downloading videos and audio will assist in the interaction between the various participating museums as well as their visitors. In Bangalore from October 20 to November 8; Mumbai from October 17 to October 25; Delhi from October 22 to October 31 and in Kolkata from October 23 to October 29.

by Nirmala Navindran

BOLD AND BEAUTIFUL: Meyer with one of his creations

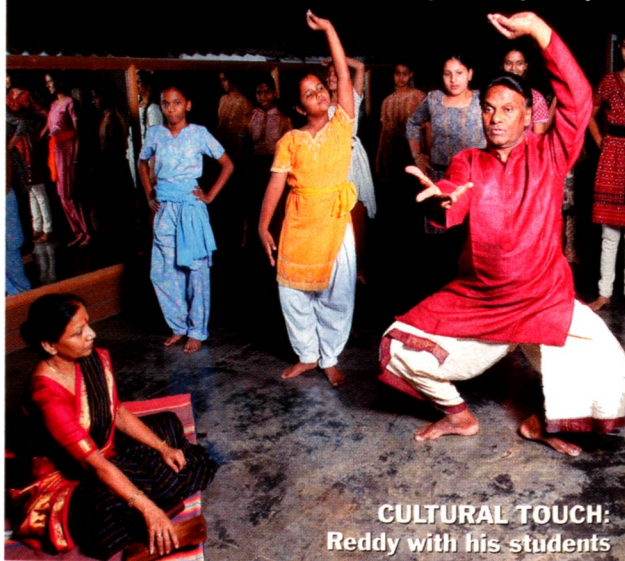

© Pedro Meyer 2008/ from "Heresies": A retrospective of Pedro Meyer festival

Traditional Revival

DELHI To keep the tradition of guru-shishya parampara alive and take it to the next level, the Natya Tarangini Raja Radha Reddy Institute of Kuchipudi Dance presents a three-day music and dance festival, Parampara. "Our tradition is like a tree, growing tall and spreading far and wide, while taking deep roots," says guru Raja Reddy. The festival opens with a dance presentation by the guru and his disciples followed by a Hindustani classical recital by Ashwini Bhide. "There is a joy in dancing with the students who after all are the face of the future," he adds. On October 25, watch the Odissi lyrical dance by Aruna Mohanty followed by a Carnatic vocal recital by Sudha Raghunathan. The festival winds up with a contemporary dance by Anita Ratnam and an Indian rock music presentation by Advaita. A variety of dance and music to keep you busy over the weekend. At Kamani Auditorium. From October 24 to 26.

by S. Sahaya Ranjit

CULTURAL TOUCH: Reddy with his students

art exhibition

A Creative Knot

DELHI Kerala-born artist Zakir Hussain displays his work titled Re-Turn of the 'Unholy'. His work includes paintings and drawings that are largely rendered in mixed media, and watercolours on paper along with a series of serigraphs. The exhibition will see 71 of his works on display along with 10 serigraphs. Each work

A work by Hussain consists of either a cluster of overlapping images or single ones, drawn with precision and in a unique style. At Vadehra Gallery. From October 18 to November 15.