

Rann of Kutch with a 350 km coastline is a remote, endless stretch with many appearances that change from dawn to dusk. Begin your day watching salt crystals that dazzle like millions of diamonds lain under the scorching sun deepening its mysteries by fantastic mirages.

Spend your day cruising through the landscape on a camel. Take a walk through the lanes of Dholavira, an almost 5000 years old Indus Valley Civilization city - known to trade by sea with ancient cities of the world, excellent town planning, striking architecture, elaborately designed water and drainage management system. Also visit forts, palaces, museums, temples and craft villages. During the journey you will discover a magnificent transition in landscape. The seemingly infinite salt desert meets with lush grasses and the dark cliffs at Kala Dungar. Here jackals peacefully feast on prashad offered to the deity at the temple of Shri Guru Duttatreya and then melt into the darkness of the hills.

In evening the entire landscape transforms into a splendid bluish glow under the full moon. Before going to bed enjoy delectable Gujarati cuisines under the moon light.

Rann of Kutch has many such surprises in the form of landscape, history, wildlife, culture, architecture, handcrafts, dance forms, fashion and cuisines. To experience everything, visit Rann Utsav from 11th to 14th December, 2008.
